The Mississippi State Department of Health's (MSDH) mission is to protect and advance the health, well-being, and safety of all Mississippians. Public health protection takes a wide variety of forms, from ensuring the safety of food and water to setting standards for health and care facilities.

Mississippi's State Board of Health was established in 1877 to protect and advance health throughout Mississippi and became the Mississippi State Department of Health in 1982. The major operations of MSDH involve health protection, health promotion and health planning.

The agency monitors diseases through disease tracking as well as through outbreak management responses. MSDH actively works to prevent illnesses such as influenza, mosquito-borne diseases, STDs, and communicable diseases, largely due to the statewide coordination of the immunization and vaccine program.

The Department's environmental protection consists of testing drinking water, regulating on-site wastewater and sewage systems, and completing restaurant permits and inspections.

The MSDH assists with disease and injury prevention by providing tobacco control and cessation programs as well as nutritional training and information. The Department focuses on chronic disease prevention and management for arthritis, diabetes, asthma, heart disease, high blood pressure, cancer, and other diseases. It also provides fire safety, car seat installation safety, and the Safe Routes to School program.

The Department helps keep the state safe by preparing the public for disasters and public health emergencies and is nationally recognized for its emergency preparedness skills. The MSDH holds regular training sessions to create response plans and ensure preparedness. The Mississippi State Department of Health has emergency readiness programs and severe weather and disaster response programs.

The agency oversees the required and recommended childhood and school entry vaccinations, including meningococcal and HPV vaccinations for adolescents. The MSDH recommends vaccinations for international travel and seasonal flu vaccines for all ages.

The Mississippi State Health Department is responsible for licensing and regulating childcare facilities, nursing homes, assisted living facilities, trauma care, hospitals, and other healthcare facilities. The MSDH ensures licensure of audiologists, occupational therapists, speech-language pathologists, dietitians, and other professions. The Department provides education, advocacy and consultation, counseling, physical exams, contraceptive supplies, STD/HIV testing, and pregnancy care.

Along with issuing birth and marriage certificates, the Department supervises and monitors medical treatments in the state. It also coordinates patients with community resources and provides special care for children with chronic or disabling conditions.

In addition to all of this, the Mississippi State Health Department provides health information to the media and the public with community training, summits, and other outreach efforts. Emergency notifications for doctors, hospitals, and the healthcare community are distributed through real-time updates on the Web, X (formerly known as Twitter), Facebook, and other digital media channels.

The MSDH hosted the state's first annual State Employee Wellness Expo for all state employees on May 23, 2024, which provided information, activities, and resources focused on promoting overall health and wellness.

STATE HEALTH OFFICER

DR. DANIEL EDNEY

601-576-7634

Dr. Edney became State Health Officer in August 2022, after serving as Deputy State Health Officer and as Chief Medical Officer for the agency.

Before joining the Mississippi State Department of Health, Dr. Edney was in private practice in Vicksburg for more than 30 years. He received his M.D. from the University of Mississippi School of Medicine with residency in the University of Virginia's internal medicine program. He holds board certifications in Internal Medicine and Addiction Medicine and is a Fellow of the American College of Physicians.

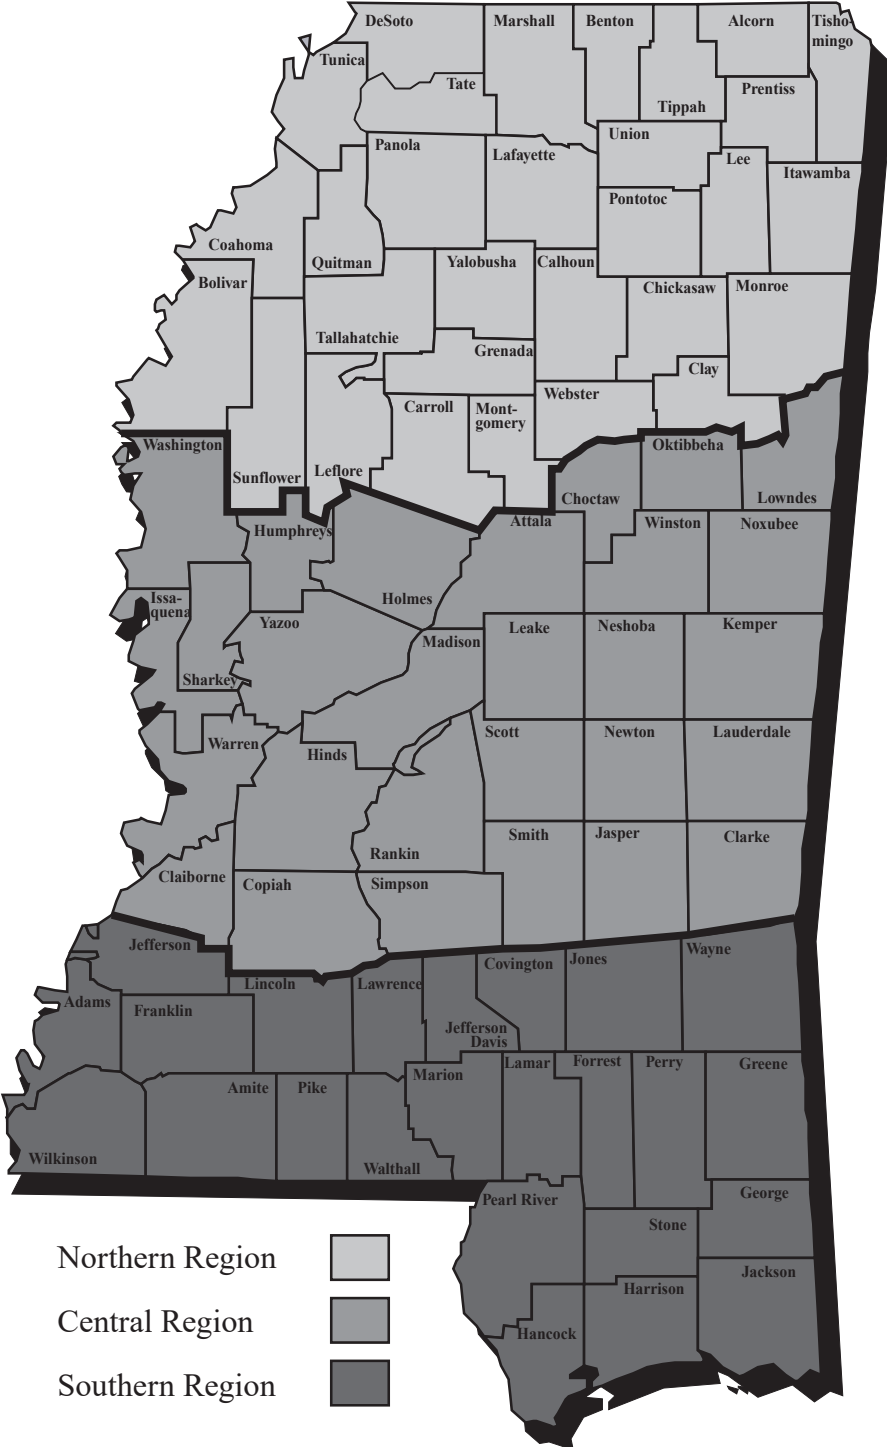

"Following in the footsteps of Dr. Dobbs, I, too, hope to serve as a catalyst for change – especially with infant and maternal mortality, the opioids battle plaguing the country right now, and moving the needle in preventive health and health equity issues," Edney added.

A summa cum laude graduate of both William Carey University and the University of Mississippi School of Medicine, Edney is a board-certified General Internist with subspecialty board certification in Addiction Medicine. He completed his internship and residency in Internal Medicine at the University of Virginia.

He has practiced general primary care internal medicine in Vicksburg since 1991 and has worked actively in the field of addiction medicine since 2013. He currently serves as an addiction medicine specialist for various inpatient residential facilities and outpatient programs in the state and has a private practice at the Medical Associates of Vicksburg.

Edney is a former president of the Mississippi State Medical Association and currently serves as a board member on the Mississippi State Board of Medical Licensure. He has also served as a fellow and laureate for the Mississippi Chapter of the American College of Physicians and a fellow of the American Society of Addiction Medicine.

The Mississippi Department of Mental Health (DMH) provides and financially supports a network of services for people with mental illness, intellectual/developmental disabilities, substance abuse problems, and Alzheimer's disease and/or other dementia. Their goal is to improve the lives of Mississippians by supporting a better tomorrow, today.

The mental health service delivery system is comprised of three major components: state-operated programs and community service programs, regional community mental health centers, and other nonprofit/profit service agencies/organizations.

The Mississippi Department of Mental Health continues to work towards a recovery-oriented system of care which focuses on a network of support and services. This includes state-run behavioral health programs, community-based care, peer-run services, involvement from family, and other types of support that incorporate the values and principles associated with recovery. DMH administers and operates six behavioral health programs. The programs provide inpatient services for people (adults and children) with serious mental illnesses and substance abuse.

Regional community mental health centers (CMHCs) operate under the authority of regional commissions appointed by county boards of supervisors comprising their service areas. The 14 regional health centers provide a range of community-based mental health, substance use, and in some regions, intellectual/developmental disabilities services. CMHC governing authorities are considered regional and not state-level entities, and the Department of Mental Health is responsible for certifying, monitoring, and assisting CMHCs. Community mental health centers are the primary service providers for community-based mental health and substance abuse services.

There are five program locations that provide residential services for people with intellectual/developmental disabilities and one center for adolescents with intellectual/developmental disabilities. These programs are a primary vehicle for delivering community services throughout the state.
